

A prism is a solid that has two congruent parallel bases.

The polygons form the bases of the prism and the length of the edge joining the two bases is called the height.

A triangular prism is a prism where the bases are triangle.

